

Online Educational Courses on the DPRK

Engage Korea is a student-driven humanitarian and educational initiative on the DPRK that aims to improve relations between the international community and North Korea. We do not follow any political agenda, and we strive to be impartial, constructive, and informative.

We hosted our debut conference at Oxford University in 2013, and we followed this successful meeting with an equally stimulating congress at Harvard University in 2014 that brought together graduate students, junior scholars, and seasoned professionals. In an effort to extend our discussions outside of our conference venues, we are now offering Online Educational Courses on the DPRK that are conducted by academics and experts. These short courses are designed for scholars and practitioners, and qualified students are selected through an application process.

Upcoming Short Course

Online Educational Course	Participating Co-Organization Creating the Course	Dates	Application Deadline
DPRK Healthcare	Korean American Medical Association Global Outreach Program	June 14, 2015 - July 11, 2015	April 15, 2015

The cost of each short course is $5.00, which will be collected through PayPal to help cover online programming costs and administrative fees. Any remaining funds will be used to help Engage Korea further its educational efforts. For more information about the short course and to apply, please complete the online application (found here) in advance of the noted deadline.
